CITCA ANNOUNCES OPENING OF REGIONAL TRAINING FACILITY NEAR DALLAS, TX

Steve Wilder, V/P and COO of CITCA, the Communication Industry Training and Certification Academy in Bradley, IL recently announced the opening a new regional training facility near Dallas, TX.

The facility, built on the campus of RIO Steel and Tower in Alvarado, TX, includes classroom training facilities as well as a specially designed training tower. “For years, CITCA has enjoyed an incredible relationship with RIO Steel and Tower” says Steve Wilder, V/P and COO of CITCA. “This new facility allows us to expand our training programs in the Dallas area, where we have always had a strong presence. Plus, both existing clients and new clients in the area will have access to more affordable training, with less travel demands and lower expenses for their employees. Now we have both instructors and a facility in the area, so the cost of training goes down” Wilder added.

The facility includes a 60’ self supporting tower, designed specifically for training. “With some simple changes, it is almost an exact replica of the tower at our Illinois campus. It is built as a training prop, with student safety a top priority, and can be used for a variety of classes and subjects” he noted.

Wilder indicated that plans are on the table to cooperatively establish regional training sites with other clients across the nation as well. “Opening the Texas facility was the result of the incredible relationship we have with RIO Steel” according to Wilder. “We take pride in the relationships we form with our clients, and those relationships are now setting the stage for additional regional training sites in other parts of the nation as well. CITCA has become known for the quality of our programs and our instructors. In this economy, companies are watching their training budgets closely, and looking for ways to do more with less. Regionalizing training and reducing the costs is part of our efforts to assist them in meeting their goals”.
